EXPERIENCE

U.S. Sentencing Commission

Director, Office of Education and Sentencing Practice, Washington, DC,
February, 2015 – January, 2023

- Lead office responsible for fulfilling the agency's statutory mission to educate, through seminars and workshops all those connected to federal sentencing, including judges, prosecutors, public and private defense attorneys, probation officers, and appellate and district court law clerks
- Manage staff of nine instructional designers, former probation officers, educators, and attorneys
- Oversee instructional design of synchronous and asynchronous online course content, and in-person training of judges, litigants, and probation officers
- Plan and execute annual national seminar for 800 to 900 attendees on sentencing guidelines and related case law
 - Responsibilities include site selection; working with finance and the office of general counsel on contract negotiations; supervising development of registration website, training materials, and mobile app; review of food and beverage and audio/visual plans; identifying and inviting speakers; preparing Commissioner remarks; leading team of subject matter experts and instructional designers to develop agenda and course materials; and teaching sessions on guidelines application and sentencing case law
- Planned and executed five annual national seminars for federal district court judges, drawing more than 100 registrants annually
 - 2015: Planned pilot program prior to launching annual event, designing curriculum and leading judge-only learning sessions
 - 2016, 2017, 2018, 2019, and 2022: Planned and executed one-and-a-half-day national seminar for judges on federal sentencing guidelines
 - Similar tasks to annual national seminar
- Represent the Commission as faculty at professional conferences nationwide, including annual conferences of the circuit courts of appeals, and seminars and workshops organized by the Federal Judicial Center
- Member of senior staff responsible for internal review of all policy-related work product and staff recommendations to Commissioners on policy matters
- Expanded the education program from all in-person training to include web resources such as podcasts, one-page primers, newsletters, a sentencing glossary aimed at non-experts, and a case law concierge for federal sentencing practitioners
- Design and deliver sentencing curriculum for the Federal Judicial Center's Phase I Orientation for District Court Judges consisting of lectures, scenarios, and case studies encompassing two and a half day sessions for more than 100 new judges since 2015
- Transitioned to synchronous online instruction during Covid quarantine, delivering online educational programs to more than 13,000 attendees
